Northampton, MA - September 15, 2009 - EZTakes, Inc., the world's first legal DVD download service, has begun selling a selection of films from W.J.R. Productions.

"We are very pleased to add the W.J.R. Productions collection to our movie download website. They offer some noteworthy films, such as the lost River Phoenix film 'Aren't You Even Gonna Kiss Me Goodbye?', which was his first starring role in a movie that also introduced Matthew Perry," said Jim Flynn, CEO of EZTakes.

Director William Richert commented, "Selling on an easy-to-use and innovative site like EZTakes is a great way to bring our films to the largest possible audience." Richert added, "By giving consumers the ability to easily burn movie downloads to playable DVDs and also export their purchases to any portable player, EZTakes provides a level of value and convenience not found in any other movie download offering."

Films by W.J.R. Productions on EZTakes include the 2008 restoration of cult comedy "Success," starring Jeff Bridges and Bianca Jagger, the Lincoln Center Dance Collection documentary "A Dancer's Life," featuring legendary Rudolph Nureyev and American Ballet Theater School, and the independent modern take on the adventure classic "The Man in the Iron Mask."
